*I*N ancient times when Helen's fatal charms
 Rouz'd the contending universe to arms,
 The Græcian council happily deputed
 The sly Ulysses forth—to raise recruits.
 The artful captain found, without delay,
 Where great Achilles, a deserter lay.
 Him fate had warn'd to shun the Trojan blows;
 Him Greece requir'd—against the Trojan foes.
 All their recruiting arts were needful here,
 To raise this great, this tim'rous volunteer.
 Ulysses well could talk—he stirs, he warms
 The warlike youth—he listens to the charms
 Of plunders, fine lac'd coats, and glitt'ring arms;
 Ulysses caught the young aspiring boy,
 And list'd him who wrought the fate of Troy.
 Thus by recruiting was bold Hector slain:
 Recruiting thus fair Helen did regain.
 If for one Helen such prodigious things
 Were acted, that they even list'd kings;
 If for one Helen's artful, vicious charms,
 Half the transported world was found in arms;
 What for so many Helens may we dare,
 Whose Minds as well as Faces are so fair?
 If by one Helen's eyes, old Greece could find
 It's Homer fir'd to write, ev'n Homer blind;
 The Britons sure beyond compare may write,
 That view so many Helens every ev'ry night.

SCENE the market-place.——Drum beats the ~~+~~ ~~+~~ ~~+~~ grenadier-march.

L. H. E. Enter Serjeant Kite, follow'd by Thomas Apple-Tree, Coltar Pear-main, and the mob.

Kite making a speech.

IF any gentleman soldiers, or others, have a mind to serve his majesty, and pull down the French king; if any 'prentices have severe masters, any children have undutiful parents: if any servants have too little wages, or any husband too much wife: let them repair to the noble serjeant Kite, at the sign of the Raven, in this good town of Shrewsbury, and they shall receive present relief and entertainment.

[Mob. Shout.]

——Gentlemen, I don't beat my drum here to insnare or inveigle any man, for you must know gentlemen, that I am a man of honour: besides, I don't beat up for common soldiers; no, I list only grenadiers, grenadiers, gentlemen—Pray, gentlemen, observe this cap——This is the cap of honour, it dubs a man a gentleman in the drawing of a trigger; and he that has the good fortune to be born six foot high, was born to be a great man—Sir, will you give me leave to try this cap upon your head?

Coff. Is there no harm in't? won't the cap list me?

Kite. No, no, no more than I can—Come, let me see how it becomes you.

Coff. Are you sure there be no conjuration in it?
no gunpowder-plot upon me?

Kite. No, no, friend; don't fear, man.

Coff. My mind misgives me plaguily——Let me see it——(Going to put it on) It smells wondrous great and brimstone. Smell Thomas.

A 3

Tho.

Tho. Ay, wauns does it.

Cof. Pray, Serjeant, what writing is this upon the face of it?

Kite. The crown, or the bed of honour.

Cof. Pray now, what may be that same bed of honour?

Kite. O! a mighty large bed! bigger by half than the great bed at Ware—ten thousand people may lie in it together, and never feel one another.

Cof. My wife and I wou'd do well to lie in't, ~~for we don't care for feeling one another.~~ But do folk sleep sound in this same bed of honour.

Kite. Sound? ay, so sound that they never 'wake.

Cof. Wauns! I wish again that my wife lay there.

Kite. Say you so! then, I find, brother—

Cof. Brother! hold there friend; I am no kindred to you that I know of yet—Look'e, Serjeant, no coaxing, no wheedling, d'ye see—If I have a mind to list, why so—If not, why 'tis not so—therefore take your cap and your brothership back again, for I am not disposed at this present writing—No coaxing, no brothering me, faith.

Kite. I coax! I wheedle! I'm above it! ~~for I have serv'd twenty campaigns~~—But, sir, you talk well, and I must own that you are a man every inch of you, ~~a pretty young sprightly fellow~~—I love a fellow with a spirit; but I scorn to coax, 'tis base: Tho' I must say, that never in my life have I seen a man better built! how firm and strong he treads! he steps like a castle; ~~but I scorn to wheedle any man~~—Come, honest lad, will you take share of a pot?

Cof. Nay, for that matter, I'll spend my penny with the best he that wears a head, that is, begging your pardon, sir, and in a fair way.

Kite. Give me your hand then; and now gentlemen, I have no more to say, but this—~~Here's a~~ Here's a purse of gold, and there is a tub of humming ale at my quarters—'Tis the king's money, and the king's drink—~~He's a generous king and loves his~~ ~~subjects~~

All mob. No, no, no.

Kite. Huzza then! huzza for the king, and the honour of Shropshire.

All Mob. Huzza!

~~Kite. Beat drum.~~ [Exeunt shouting, drum beating a R.H.
grenadier's march.]

Enter Plume in a riding habit.

Plume. By the grenadier march that thou'd be my drum; and by that shout, it shou'd beat with success—Let me see—Four a clock—[Locking on his watch.] At ten yesterday morning I left London—~~A hundred and twenty miles in thirty hours is pretty~~ smart riding, but nothing to the fatigue of recruiting.

Re-Enter Kite. B. (Salute)

Kite. Welcome to Shrewsbury, noble captain: from the banks of the Danube to the Severn side, noble captain, you're welcome.

Plume. A very elegant reception indeed, Mr. Kite. I find you are fairly enter'd into your recruiting strain:—Pray what success?

Kite. I have been here a week, and I have recruited five!

Plume. Five! pray what are they?

Kite. I have lifted the strong man of Kent, the king of the Gypsies, a Scotch pedlar, a scoundrel attorney, and a Welch parson.

Plume. An attorney! wert thou mad? lift a lawyer! discharge him, discharge him this minute.

Kite. Why, sir?

Plume. Because I will have no body in my company that can write; ~~a fellow that can write, can draw per-~~ ~~titions.~~—I say this minute discharge him.

Kite. And what shall I do with the parson?

Plume. Can he write?

Kite. Hum! he plays rarely upon the fiddle.

Plume. Keep him by all means—But how stands the country affected? were the people pleas'd with the news of my coming to town?

A 4

Kite.

THE RECRUITING OFFICER.

Kite. Sir, the mob are so pleas'd with your honour, and the justices and better sort of people are so delighted with me, that we shall soon do your business—
But, sir, you have got a recruit here that you little think of.

Plume. Who?

Kite. One that you beat up for the last time you were in the country: you remember your old friend Molly at the castle?

Plume. She's not with child, I hope.

Kite. ~~No, no, sir~~—she was brought to bed yesterday.

Plume. Kite, you must father the child.

Kite. And so her friends will oblige me to marry the mother.

Plume. If they shou'd, we'll take her with us; she can wash you know; and make a bed upon occasion.

Kite. ~~Oh, or unmake it upon occasion~~ But your honour knows that I am marry'd already.

Plume. To how many?

Kite. I can't tell readily—I have set them down here upon the back of the muster-roll. [Draws it out.] Let me see,—Imprimis, Mrs. Shely Snikereyes, she sells potatoes upon Ormond-key in Dublin—Peggy Guzzle, the brandy woman, at the horse-guards, at Whiteball—Dolly Waggon, the carrier's daughter at Hull—Mademoiselle Van-bottom-flat at the Busi—Then Jenny Oakbam, the ship carpenter's widow, at Portsmouth; but I don't reckon upon her, for she was married at the same time to two lieutenants of marines, and a man of war's boatswain.

Plume. A full company—You have nam'd five—Come, make 'em half a dozen—Kite is the child a boy or a girl?

Kite. A chopping boy.

Plume. Then set the mother down in your list, and the boy in mine; enter him a grenadier by the name of Francis Kite, I sent upon furlow—I'll allow you man's pay for his subsistence, and now go comfort the wench in the straw new wife.

you must surely be like

THE RECRUITING OFFICER. 9

Kite. I shall, sir.

Plume. But hold, have you made any use of your German doctor's habit since you arriv'd?

Kite. Yes, yes, sir, and my fame's all about the country for the most faithful fortune-teller that ever told a lie—

~~I was oblig'd to let my landlord into the secret, for the convenience of keeping it so: but he's an honest fellow, and will be faithful to any roguery that is trusted to him.~~

This device, sir, will get you men, and me money, which, I think, is all we want at present—But yonder comes your friend Mr. Worthy—Has your honour any farther commands?

Plume. None at present. [Exit. Kite.] 'Tis indeed the picture of Worthy, but the life's departed.

Enter Worthy.

What, arms a-crofs, Worthy! methinks you should hold 'em open, when a friend's so near—The man has got the vapours in his ears, I believe: I must expect this melancholy spirit.

Spleen, thou worst of fiends below,
Fly, I conjure thee, by this magick blow.

[Slaps Worthy on the shoulder.

Wor. Plume! my dear captain, welcome. Safe and sound ~~return'd~~ I hope.

Plume. I fear'd late from Germany, and found, I hope, from London; you see I have lost neither leg, arm, ~~conscience~~, then for my inside, 'tis neither troubled with sympathies nor antipathies; and I have an excellent stomach for roast-beef.

Wor. Thou art a happy fellow; ~~once I was so.~~

Plume. What ails thee, man? ~~no inundations nor earthquakes in Wales.~~ I hope? Has your father risen from the dead, and re-assum'd his estate?

Wor. No.

Plume. Then you are marry'd surely.

Wor. No.

Plume. Then you are mad, or ~~turning quaker.~~

Wor. Come, I must out with ~~that~~ Your once gay,

10 THE RECRUITING OFFICER.

roving friend, is dwindled into an obsequious, thoughtful, romantic, constant coxcomb.

Plume. And pray what is all this for?

Wor. For a woman.

Plume. Give me thy hand: if ^{you} ~~then~~ go to that, behold me as obsequious, as thoughtful, and as constant a coxcomb as your worship.

Wor. For whom?

Plume. For a regiment——But for a woman! 'sdeath! I have been constant to fifteen at a time, but never melancholy for one, ~~and can the love of one bring you into this condition?~~ pray, who is this wonderful Helen!

Wor. A Helen indeed, not to be won under a ten years siege, as great a beauty and as great a jilt.

Plume. A jilt! pho! is she as great a whore?

Wor. No, no.

Plume. 'Tis ten thousand pities: but who is she? do I know her?

Wor. Very well.

Plume. That impossible——I know no woman that will hold out a ten year's siege.

Wor. What think ye of Melinda?

Plume. Melinda! ~~when she began to capitulate this time twelve-month, and offered to surrender upon honourable terms; and I advis'd you to propose a settlement of five hundred pounds a year to her, before I went last abroad.~~

Wor. I did, and she hearken'd to it, desiring only one week to consider——When, beyond her hopes, the town was reliev'd, and I forc'd to turn my siege into a blockade.

Plume. Explain, explain.

Wor. My lady Richley, her aunt in Flintshire dies, and leaves her, at this critical time, twenty thousand pounds.

Plume. Oh the devil! what a delicate woman was there! but by the rules of war now——

Wor. blockades was foolish——After such a convoy of provisions was enter'd the place, ~~you could have no thought of reducing it by famine; you must have redoubled~~

Δ
Kite — Puss

launched your attacks, taken the town by storm, or have dy'd upon the breach.

Wor. I did make one general assault, and push'd it with all my forces; but I was so vigorously repuls'd, that despairing of ever gaining her for a mistress, I have alter'd my conduct, given my addresses the obsequious and distant turn, and court her now for a wife.

Plume. So as you grew obsequious, she grew haughty; and because you approach'd her as a goodess, she us'd you like a dog.

Wor. Exactly.

Plume. 'Tis the way of 'em all. — Come, Wor- thy, your obsequious and distant airs will never bring you together; you must not think to surmount her pride by your humility: would you bring her to better thoughts of you, she must be reduc'd to a meaner opinion of herself. Let me see, the very first thing that I would do, should be to ~~to~~ ^{make love to} ~~visit~~ her chambermaid, and hire three or four wenches in the neighbourhood to report that I had got them with child.

Suppose we lampoon'd all the pretty women in town, and left her out; or, what if we made a ball, and forgot to invite her with one or two of the ugliest.

Wor. These wou'd be mortifications, I must confess; but we live in such a precise, dull place, that we can have no balls, ~~no lampoons~~, no —

Plume. What! ~~no balls~~! and so many recruiting officers in town! I thought 'twas a maxim among them, to leave as many recruits in the country as they carry'd out.

Wor. Nobody doubts your good will, ^{But} noble captain, ~~in forcing your country with your hot blood~~, witness our friend Molly at the castle; there have been tears in town about that business, captain.

Plume. I hope Sylvia has not heard of it.

Wor. O, sir, have you thought of her? I began to fancy you had forgot poor Sylvia.

Plume. Your affairs had quite put mine out of my head. 'Tis true, Sylvia and I had once agreed to go to bed together, cou'd we have adjust'd preliminaries; but she wou'd have the wedding before consummation, ~~as it was for consummation before the wedding; we~~ ^{pt. 20} cou'd not agree. She was a pert, obstinate fool, and wou'd lose her maidenhead her own way, so she may keep it for Plume.

A 6 might have been Man & Wife

Wor. But do you intend to marry upon no other conditions?

Plume. ~~Your pardon, sir, I'll marry upon no condition at all.~~ ^{Certainly not!} ~~If I should, I am resolv'd never to bind myself to a woman for my whole life, till I know whether I shall like her company for half an hour. Suppose I marry'd a woman that wanted a leg—~~ ~~such a thing might be, unless I examin'd the goods before hand—~~ ~~if people wou'd but take one another's constitution,~~ before they engag'd, it would prevent all these elopements, divorces, and the devil knows what.

Wor. Nay, for that matter, the town did not stick to say, that—

Plume. ~~I hate country towns for that reason.~~ If your town has a dishonourable thought of Sylvia, it deserves to be burnt to the ground—I love Sylvia, I admire her frank, generous disposition—~~There's something in that girl more than women,~~ ^{her sex} 'is but a foil to her. The ingratitude, dissimulation, envy, pride, avarice, and vanity of her sister females, do but set off their contraries in her'—In short, were I once a general, I wou'd marry her.

Wor. Faith, you have reason—for were you but a corporal, she wou'd marry you—But my Melinda coquets it with every fellow she sees—I'll lay fifty pound she makes love to you.

Plume. I'll lay you a hundred that I return it, if she does—~~Look's, Worthy, I'll win her, and give her to you afterwards.~~

Wor. If you win her, you shall wear her, faith; I wou'd not value the conquest, without the credit of the victory.

Wor. Sylvia? Impossible!

Kite. Here are the guineas, sir.——I took the gold as part of my wife's portion. Nay, farther sir, ~~she sent word the child should be taken all imaginable care of, and that she intended to stand godmother.~~ The same footman, as I was coming to you with this news, call'd after me, and told me, that his lady would speak with me——I went, and upon hearing that you were come to town, she gave me half a guinea for the news: and order'd me to tell you, that justice Ballance, her father, who is just come out of the country, would be glad to see you.

Plume. There's a girl for you, Worthy——Is there any thing of woman in this? No, 'tis noble, generous, manly friendship; ~~show me another woman that would lose an inch of her prerogative that way, without tears, fits and reproaches. L. Melinda and Sylvia meeting. R.

Mel. Welcome to town, cousin Sylvia, [salute.] I envy'd your retreat in the country: ~~for I can assure you, that~~ ~~methinks, and all your heads of thires, are the most~~ ~~irregular places for living;~~ here we have smoak, noise, scandal, affectation, and pretension; in short, every thing to give the spleen—and nothing to divert it—then the air is intolerable. [Sylvia enters.]

Syl. O madam! I have heard the town commended for its air.

Mel. But you don't consider, Sylvia, how long I have lived in't! ~~for I can assure you, that~~ to a lady, the least nice in her constitution——no air can be good above half a year. Change of air, I take to be the most agreeable variety in life.

Syl. As you say, cousin Melinda, there are several sort of airs.

Mel. Pshaw! I talk only of the air we breathe, or more properly of that we taste——Have not you,
Sylvia, found a vast difference in the taste of airs?

Syl. Pray, cousin, are not vapours a sort of air?
taste

R.H.

neg-

taste air! you might as well tell me, I might feed upon air: but prythee, ~~my~~ dear Melinda, don't put on such an air to me. Your education and mine were just the same; and I remember the time when we never troubled our heads about air, but when the sharp air from the Welch mountains made our fingers ake in a cold morning at ~~the~~ boarding-school.

Mel. Our education, cousin, was the same, but our temperaments had nothing alike; you have the constitution of an horse.

Syl. So far as to be troubled with neither spleen, ~~cholic~~, nor vapours; I need no salts for my stomach, no harts-horn for my head, nor wash for my complexion. I can gallop all the morning after the hunting-horn, and all the evening after a fiddle. ~~In short,~~ I can do every thing with my father, but drink, and ~~shoot flying,~~ and I'm sure I can do every thing my mother could, were I put to the trial.

Mel. You are in a fair way of being put to't; for I am told your captain is come to town.

Syl. Ay, Melinda, he is come, and I'll take care he shan't go without a companion.

Mel. You are certainly mad, cousin.

Syl. ——— And there's a pleasure sure

In being mad, which none but madmen know. + L

Mel. Thou poor romantick Quixote! — Hast thou the vanity to imagine, that a young sprightly officer, that rambles o'er half the globe in half a year, can confine his thoughts to the little daughter of a country justice, ² in an obscure part of the world?

Syl. Pshaw! what care I for his thoughts; I shou'd not like a man with confin'd thoughts; it shews a narrowness of soul. ~~Constancy is but a dull sleepy~~ quality at best, they will hardly admit it among the manly virtues; nor do I think it deserves a place with bravery, knowledge, policy, justice, and ~~some~~ other qualities that are proper to that noble sex. In short, Melinda, I think a petticoat a mighty simple thing, and I am heartily tir'd of my sex.

Mel. That is, you are tir'd of an appendix to our sex, that you can't so handsomely get rid of in petti- coats,

Syl. I shou'd have endeavour'd to know the world, which a man can never do thoroughly, without half a hundred friendships, and as many amours; but now I think on't, how stands your affair with Mr. Worthy?

Mel. He's my aversion.

Syl. Vapours!

Mel. What do you say, ~~madam~~?

Syl. I say, that you should not use that honest fellow so inhumanly. He's a gentleman of parts and fortune; and besides that, he's my Plume's friend, and by all that's sacred, if you don't use him better, I shall expect satisfaction.

Mel. Satisfaction! you begin to fancy yourself ~~in~~ mean breeches in good earnest—But to be plain with you, I like Worthy the worse for being so intimate with your captain, for I take him to be a loose, idle, unmannerly coxcomb.

Indeed Syl. ~~madam~~! you never saw him, perhaps since you were mistress of twenty thousand pounds; you only knew him when you were capitulating with Worthy for a settlement, which perhaps might encourage him to be a little loose, and unmannerly with you.

Mel. What do you mean, madam?

Syl. My meaning needs no interpretation, madam.

Mel. Better it had, madam; for methinks you are too plain.

Syl. If you mean the plainness of my person, I think your ladyship's as plain as ~~me~~ to the full. I am

Mel. Were I sure of that, I wou'd be glad to take up with a rake ~~only~~ officer as you do.

Syl. Again! Look'e madam, you're in your own house.

Mel. And if you had kept in your's, I shou'd have excus'd you.

Syl. Don't be troubled, madam, I shan't desire to have my visit return'd.

Mel. The sooner therefore you make an end of this, the better.

R. Enter Justice Ballance and Plume.

Ball. Look'e, captain, give us but ~~money~~ victoria money, and you shan't want men.

~~I remember that for some years of the last war, we had 'no blood, no wounds, but in the officers mouths; 'nothing for our millions but news-papers not worth 'a reading—Our army did nothing but play at prison-bars, and hide and seek with the enemy; but 'now to have brought us colours, and standards, and 'prisoners!—Ad's my life, captain, get us but another marshal of France, and I'll go myself for a soldier—~~

Plume. Pray, Mr. Ballance, how does your fair daughter?

Ball.

Ball. Ah, captain? what is my daughter to a marshal of France? We're upon a nobler subject, I want to have a particular description of the battle of ~~Marston~~.

Plume. The battle, sir, was a very pretty battle ~~and any one should desire to see~~, but we were all so intent upon victory, that we never minded the battle: All that I know of the matter is, our general commanded us to beat the ~~French~~, and we did so; and if he pleases but to say the word, we'll do it again. But pray, sir, how does Mrs. Sylvia?

Ball. Still upon Sylvia! For shame, captain, you are engag'd already, wedded to the war; victory is your mistress, and 'tis below a foldier to think of any other.

Plume. As a mistress, I confess; but as a friend, Mr. Ballance—

Ball. Come, come, captain, never mince the matter, wou'd not you ~~debauch~~ my daughter, if you cou'd.

Plume. How, sir! I hope she's not to be ~~debauch'd~~.

Ball. Faith, but she is, sir; ~~and any woman in England of her age and complexion, by a man of your youth and vigour~~. Look'e, captain, once I was young, and ~~was~~ an officer as you are; and I can guess at your thoughts now, by what mine were then; and I remember very well, that I wou'd have given one of my legs to have deluded the daughter of an old country gentleman, as like me as I was then like you.

Plume. But, sir, was that country gentleman your friend and benefactor?

Ball. Not much of that.

Plume. There the comparifon breaks: the favours, sir, that—

Ball. Pho, pho, I hate set speeches; if I have done you any service captain, 'twas to please myself; ~~I love thee~~, and if I could part with my girl, you shou'd have her as soon as any young fellow I know: but I hope you have more honour than to quit the service; and she more prudence than to follow the camp; but she's at her own disposal, she has fifteen hundred pounds in her pocket, and so—Sylvia, Sylvia. Syl. Sir, you are welcome to England.

Plume. You are indebted to me a welcome, madam, since the hopes of receiving it from this fair hand, was the principal cause of my seeing England.

L. Syl. I have often heard, that soldiers were sincere, shall I venture to believe publick report?

H. Plume. You may, when 'tis back'd by private insurance; for I swear, madam, by the honour of my profession, that whatever dangers I went upon, it was with the hope of making myself more worthy of your esteem; and if ever I had thoughts of preserving my life, 'twas for the pleasure of dying at your feet.

Syl. Well, well, you shall die at my feet; ~~and~~ you will, but you know, sir, there is a certain will and testament to be made before-hand.

Plume. My will, madam, is made already, and there it is; and if you please to open this ~~parchment~~ paper, which was drawn the evening before the ~~battle~~ our late Battle of ~~Marston~~, you will find whom I left my heir.

My Syl. Mrs Sylvia Ballance, [Opens the will and reads.] Well, captain, this is a handsome and a substantial compliment; but I can assure you, I am much better pleased with the bare knowledge of your intention, than I shou'd have been in the possession of your legacy; ~~but methinks, sir, you shou'd have left some thing to~~ your little boy at the Castle.

Plume. That's home, [Aside.] My little boy! Lack-a-day, madam, that alone may convince you 'twas none of mine; ~~why~~ the girl, madam, is my serjeant's wife, and so the poor creature gave birth that I was father, my friends in hopes that my friends might support her in case of necessity. — That was all, madam — My boy! No, he might support no, no.

Plume. Ill news! ~~Heaven~~ ^{Heaven} avert it, nothing could touch me nearer than to see that generous worthy gentleman afflicted: I'll leave you to comfort him, and be assur'd, that if my life and fortune can be any way serviceable to the father of my Sylvia, he shall freely command both.

Syl. The necessity must be very pressing, that would engage me to endanger either.

Syl. Whilst there is life, there is hope, sir? perhaps my brother may recover.

Ball. We have but little reason to expect it; the doctor acquaints me here, that before this comes to my hands, he fears I shall have no son—Poor Owen!

But the decree is just, I was pleas'd with the death of my father, because he left me an estate, and now I am punish'd with the loss of an heir to inherit mine; I must now look upon you as the only hope of my family, and I expect that the augmentation of your fortune will give you fresh thoughts, and new prospects.

L Syl. My desire ^{to be} ~~of being~~ punctual in my obedience requires that you would be plain in your commands, sir.

Ball. The death of your brother makes you sole heiress to my estate, which you know is about ~~2000~~ ²⁰⁰⁰ pounds a year: this fortune gives you a fair claim to quality, and a title; you must set a just value upon yourself, and in plain terms, think no more of Captain Plume.

THE RECRUITING OFFICER. 21

Ball. And I do so still, he's a very pretty fellow; but tho' I like him well enough for a bare son-in-law, I don't approve of him for an heir to my estate and family; fifteen hundred pounds indeed I might trust in his hands, and it might do the young fellow a kindness, but,—odds my life, ~~twelve hundred pounds a year~~ ¹²⁰⁰⁰ would ruin him, quite turn his brain: a captain of foot worth ~~twelve hundred pound a year~~ ^{2,000} 'tis a prodigy in nature: ~~besides this, I have five or six thousand~~

~~pounds in woods upon my estate. O! that wou'd make him stark mad: for you must know, that all captains have a mighty aversion to timber, they can't endure to see trees standing: then I shou'd have some rogue of a builder, by the help of his damn'd magick art, transform my noble oaks and elms into cornishes, portals, fashies, birds, beasts and devils, to adorn some magotty, new-fashion'd bauble upon the Thames; and then I shou'd have a dog of a gardener bring a habeas corpus for my terra firma, remove it to Chelsee, or Twickenham, and clap it into grass-plats and gravel-walks.~~

~~Enter a servant.~~ James? Miller

Ser. Sir, here's one with a letter below for your worship, but he will deliver it into no hands but your own.

Ball. Come, shew me the messenger.

[Exit with servant. R.]

Syl. Make the dispute between love and duty, and I am Prince Prettyman exactly. — If my brother dies, ah poor brother! if he lives, ah poor sister! 'Tis bad both ways; I'll try it again — Follow my own inclinations, and break my father's heart; or obey his commands, and break my own; worse and worse. Suppose I take it thus? A moderate fortune, a pretty fellow and a pad; or a fine estate, a coach and six, and an ass — That will never do neither.

R Enter Justice Ballance and a servant

Ball. Put four horses to the coach. [To a servant who goes out.] H. Sylvia.

22 THE RECRUITING OFFICER.

Ball. How old were you when your mother dy'd?

Syl. So young, that I don't remember I ever had one; and you have been so careful, so indulgent to me since, that indeed I never wanted one.

Ball. Have I ever deny'd you any thing you ask'd of me?

Syl. Never that I remember.

Ball. Then, Sylvia, I must beg that once in your life you wou'd grant me a favour.

Syl. Why shou'd you question it, sir?

Ball. I don't, but I wou'd rather counsel than command; I don't propose this with the authority of a parent, but as the advise of your friend; that you wou'd take the coach this moment, and go into the country.

Syl. Does this advice, sir, proceed from the contents of the letter you receiv'd just now?

Ball. No matter, I will be with you in three or four days, and then give you my reasons—But before you go, I expect you will make me one solemn promise.

Syl. Propose the thing, sir.

Ball. That you will never dispose of yourself to any man, without my consent.

Syl. I promise.

Ball. Very well, and to be even with you, I promise I never will dispose of you without your own consent, and so, Sylvia, the coach is ready; farewell. [Leads her to the door, and returns.] Now she's gone, I'll examine the contents of this letter a little nearer.

Wor. I'm sorry, sir, to be the messenger of ill news.

Ball. I apprehend it, sir, you have heard that my son Owen is past recovery.

Wor. My letters say he's dead, sir. murder

Ball. He's happy, and I'm satisfy'd: the strokes of Heaven I can bear; but injuries from men, Mr. Worthy, are not so easily supported.

Wor. I hope, sir, you're under no apprehension of wrong from any body.

Ball. You know I ought to be.

Wor. You wrong my honour, in believing I cou'd know any thing to your prejudice, without resenting it as much as you shou'd.

Ball. This letter, sir, which I tear in pieces to conceal the person that sent it, informs me, that Plume has a design upon Sylvia, and that you are privy to't.

Wor. Nay then, sir, I must do myself justice, and endeavour to find out the author, (Takes up a bit.) Sir, I know the hand, and if you refuse to discover the contents, Melinda shall tell me. (Going. R.)

Ball. Hold, sir, the contents I have told you already, only with this circumstance, that her intimacy with Mr. Worthy had drawn the secret from him.

Wor. Her intimacy with me! Dear sir, let me pick up the pieces of this letter; 'twill give me such a hank upon her pride, to have her own an intimacy under her hand: this was the luckiest accident! (Gathering up the letter.) The aspersions, sir, was nothing but malice, the effect of a little quarrel between her and Miss Sylvia.

Ball.

Ball. Are you sure of that, sir?

Wor. Her maid gave me the history of part of the battle, just now, as she over-heard it. But I hope, sir, your daughter has suffer'd nothing upon the account.

Ball. No, no, poor girl, she's so afflicted with the news of her brother's death, that to avoid company, she begg'd leave to be gone into the country.

Wor. And is she gone?

Ball. I cou'd not refuse her, she was so pressing; the coach went from the door the minute before you came.

Wor. So pressing to be gone, sir!—I find her fortune will give her the same airs with Melinda, and then Plume and I may laugh at one another.

Ball. Like enough, women are as subject to pride as men are; and why mayn't great women, as well as great men, forget their old acquaintance?—But come, where's this young fellow? I love him so well, it would break the heart of me to think him a rascal—I'm glad my daughter's gone fairly off tho'. (Aside.) Where does the captain quarter?

Wor. At Horton's; I am to meet him there two hours hence, and we should be glad of your company.

Ball. Your pardon, dear Worthy, I must allow a day or two to the death of my son: the decorum of mourning is what we owe the world, because they pay it to us. Afterwards, I'm yours over a bottle, or how you will.

Plume. That's easily known; have either of you receiv'd any of the king's money?

Coff. Not a brasn farthing, sir.

Kite. Sir, they have each of them receiv'd one and twenty shillings, and 'tis now in their pockets.

Coff. Wounds, if I have a penny in my pocket but a bent six-pence, I'll be content to be listed, and shot into the bargain.

Tho. And I: look ye here, sir.

Coff. Nothing but the king's picture, that the serjeant gave me just now.

Kite. See there, a guinea, one and twenty shillings; 't'other has the fellow on't.

L. C. Plume. The case is plain, gentlemen, the goods are found upon you: those pieces of gold are worth one and twenty shillings each.

Coff. So it seems, that Carolus is one and twenty shillings in Latin.

Tho. 'Tis the same thing in Greek, for we are listed.

Coff. Flesh! but we an't, Tummas: I desire to be carry'd before the mayor, captain.

[Captain and Serjeant whisper the while.

Plume. 'Twill never do, Kite——your damn'd tricks will ruin me at last——~~I won't lose the fellows tho', if I can help it~~——Well, gentlemen, there must be some trick in this; my serjeant offers to take his oath that you are fairly listed.

Tho. Why, captain, we know that you soldiers have more liberty of conscience than other folks; but for me, or neighbour Cofter here, to take such an oath, 'twou'd be downright perjury.

Plume. Look'e, rascal, you villain, if I find that you have impos'd upon these two honest fellows, I'll trample you to death, you dog——Come, how was't? (To them)

Tho. Nay then, we'll speak; your serjeant, as you say, is a rogue, an't like your worship, begging your worship's pardon—and——

Cof. Nay, Tummas, let me speak; you know I can read——And so, fir, he gave us those two pieces of money for pictures of the king, by way of a present. (Draws his sword.)

Plume. How! by way of a present! the son of a gan! where! I'll teach him to abuse honest fellows, like you! scoundrel, rogue, villain!

Plume. I desire no man to go with me, but as I went myself: I went a volunteer, as you, or you, may do; for a little time carry'd a musket, and now I command a company.

You must know, sir, I was born a gipsy, and bred among that crew till I was ten years old, there I learn'd canting and lying; I was bought from my mother Clecpatra, by a certain nobleman for three guineas, ~~who took my beauty, made me his page,~~ there I learn'd impudence and pimping. I was turn'd off for wearing my Lord's linen, and drinking my lady's ratafia, and turn'd bailiff's follower; there I learn'd bullying and swearing. I at last got into the army, and there I learn'd ~~drinking~~ and drinking—1 drinking So that if your worship pleases to cast up the whole sum, viz. Canting, lying, impudence, pimping, bullying, swearing, ~~drinking~~, drinking, and a halbert, you will find the sum total amounting to a recruiting sergeant.

Wor. And pray what induc'd you to turn foldier?

Kite. Hunger and ambition; the fears of starving, and hopes of a truncheon, led me along to a gentleman with a fair tongue, ~~and fair periwig~~, who loaded me with promises; but 'gad it was the lightest load that I ever felt in my life.—He promis'd to advance me, and indeed he did so—to a garret in the Savey. I asked him why he put me in prison; he call'd me lying dog, and said I was in garrison; and indeed, 'tis a garrison that may hold out till doomsday before I shou'd desire to take it again. But here comes Justice Ballance. ¹

Enter Ballance and Bullock. ²

Ball. Here, you serjeant, where's your captain? here's a poor foolish fellow comes clamouring to me with a complaint, that your captain has press'd his sister; do you know any thing of this matter, Worthy.

Wor. ~~Ha, ha, ha!~~ I know his sister is gone with Plume to his lodging, to sell him some chickens.

Ball. Is that all? the fellow's a fool.

J. Bull. I know that, an't like your worship; but if your worship pleases to grant me a warrant to bring her before your worship for fear of the worst.

Ball. Thou'rt mad, fellow, thy sister is safe enough.

Kite. I hope so too.

[Aside.]

Wor. Hast thou no more sense, fellow, than to believe that the captain can list women.

Bull. I knew not whether they list them, or what they do with them, but I am sure they carry as many women as men with them out of the country.

Ball. But how came you not to go along with your sister;

Bull. Lord, sir, I thought no more of her going than I do of the day I shall die; but this gentleman here not suspecting any hurt neither, I believe ——— Sir you thought no harm, ~~friend~~ did you?

Kite. Lackaday, sir, not I—only that I believe, ~~I shall marry her to-morrow.~~ ^[Aside.]

Ball. I begin to smell powder. Well, friend, but what did that gentleman with you?

Bull. Why, sir, he entertain'd me with a fine story of of a great sea-fight between the Hungarians, I think it was, and the Wild-Irish.

Kite. And so, sir, while we were in the heat of battle—the captain carry'd off the baggage.

Ball. Serjeant, go along with this fellow to your captain, give him my humble service, and desire him to discharge the wench, tho' he has lifted her. Exeunt up

Bull. Ay, and if he ben't free for that, he shall have another man in her place.

Kite. Come, honest friend, you shall go to my quarters instead of the captain's [Afide.]

[Exeunt Kite and Bullock.]

L. Ball. We must get this mad captain his complement of men, and send him packing, else he'll over-run the country.

L. Wor. You see, sir, how little he values your daughter's disdain.

Ball. I like him the better; I was just such another fellow at his age: ~~it never set my heart upon any woman so much as to make myself uneasy at the disappointment; but what was very surprizing both to myself and friends, I chang'd o' th' sudden, from the most fickle lover, to the most constant husband in the world.~~ But how goes your affair with Melinda?

Wor. Very slowly, Cupid had formerly wings, but I think, in this age, he goes upon crutches; or I fancy Venus had been dallying with her cripple Vulcan when my amour commenc'd, which has made it go on so lamely; my mistress has got a captain too, but such a captain! as I live, yonder he comes.

Ball. Who? that bluff fellow in the full! I don't know him.

Wor. But I engage he knows you, and every body at first sight; his impudence were a prodigy, were not his ignorance proportionable; he has the most universal acquaintance of any man living, for he won't be alone, and no body will keep him company twice; then he's a Cæsar among the women, veni, vidi, vici, that's all. If he has but talk'd with the maid, maid, he swears he has ^{left} with the mistress; but the most surprizing part of his character is his memory, which is the most prodigious, and the most trifling in the world.

Ball. 'I have met with such men, and I take this good for nothing memory to proceed from a certain contexture of the brain, which is purely adapted to impertinencies, and there they lodge secure, the owner having no thoughts of his own to disturb them. I have known a man as perfect as a chronologer, as to the day and year of most important transactions, but be altogether ignorant in the consequences of any one thing of moment. I have known another acquire so much by travel, as to tell you the names of most places in Europe, with their distances of miles, leagues or hours, as punctually as a post-boy; but for any thing else, as ignorant as the horse that carries the mail.

Wor. This is your man, sir, add but the traveller's privilege of lying, and even that he abuses. ~~This is the picture; behold the life, (X to Brazen.)~~

Enter Brazen.

Braz. Mr. Worthy, I am your servant, and so forth — Hark'e, my dear.

Wor. Whispering, sir, before company is not manners, and when no body's by, 'tis foolish.

Braz. Company! mort de ma vie! I beg the gentleman's pardon; who is he?

Wor. Ask him.

Braz. So I will. My dear, I am your servant, and so forth; — your name, my dear?

Ball. Very Laconick, sir.

Braz. Laconick! a very good name truly: I have known several of the Laconicks abroad: poor Jack Laconick! He was kill'd at the battle of ~~Marston~~. I remember that he had a blue ribbon in his hat that very day, and after he fell, we found a piece of neat's tongue in his pocket.

Ball. Pray, sir, did the French attack us, or we them, ~~and~~ —

Wor. Then, fir, you must have rid mighty hard.

Ball. Or perhaps, fir, ~~like my countrymen~~, you rid upon half a dozen horses at once.

Braz. What do ye mean, gentlemen? I tell you they were kill'd, all torn to pieces by cannon-shot, except six I stak'd to death upon the enemies Chevaux de frise.

Ball. Noble captain, may I crave your name?

C. ~~Braz.~~ Brazen, at your service.

R. Ball. Oh, Brazen, a very good name; I have known several of the Brazens abroad.

L. Wor. Do you know one captain Plume, fir?

Braz. Is he any thing related to Frank Plume in Northamptonshire?—Honest Frank! many, many a dry bottle have we crack'd hand to fist; you must have known his brother Charles that was concern'd in the India Company, he marry'd the daughter of old Tongue-Pad, the Master in Chancery, a very pretty woman, only squinted a little; she dy'd in child-bed of her first child; but the child surviv'd, 'twas a daughter, but whether 'twas call'd Margaret or Margery, upon my soul, I can't remember, [Looking on his watch.] But gentlemen, I must meet a lady, a twenty thousand pounder, presently, upon the walk by the water—Worthy, your servant, Lacnick yours!

Ball. If you can have so mean an opinion of Melinda, as to be jealous of this fellow, I think she ought to give you cause to be so.

Wor. ~~I don't think she encourages him so much for gaining herself a lover, as to set me up a rival; Were there any credit to be given to his words, I should believe~~ lieve Melinda had made him this assignation; I must go see; sir, you'll pardon me. X and. [Exit. R.]

Ball. Ay, ay, sir, you're a man of business—But what have we got here?

R. H. 2 Enter Rose singing. with her Basket.

Rose. And I shall be a lady, a captain's lady, and ride single upon a white horse with a star, upon a velvet side-saddle; and I shall go to London, and see the tombs, and the lions, and the king. Sir, an please your worship, I have often seen your worship ride through our grounds a hunting, begging your worship's pardon—pray what may this lace be worth a yard?

(aside) Ball. Right Mecblin, by this light! where did you get this lace, child?

Rose. No matter for that, sir, I came honestly by it.

Ball. I question it much.

Rose. And see here, sir, a fine Turkey-shell snuff-box, ~~and fine mangere, see here,~~ [Takes snuff affectedly.] The captain learn'd me how to take it with an air.

Ball. Oho! the captain! now the murder's out, and so the captain taught you to take it with an air.

Rose. Yes, and give it with an air too——will your worship please to taste my snuff?

[Offers the box affectedly.]

Ball. You are a very apt scholar, pretty maid. And pray, what did you give the captain for these fine things?

Rose. He's to have my brother for a soldier, and two or three sweet-hearts that I have in the country, they shall all go with the captain: O he's the finest man, and the humblest withall; wou'd you believe it, sir, he carry'd me ~~up with him~~ to his own ~~chamber~~, with as much fam-mam-mill-yararality as if I had been the best lady in the land.

Chorus

R. Enter Melinda, and her maid Lucy.

Mel. And, pray, was it a ring, or buckle, ~~or~~ ~~pendants, or knotes~~ or in what shape was the almighty gold transform'd, that has brib'd you so much in his favour?

R. Luc. Indeed, madam, the last bribe I had from the captain, was only a small piece of Flanders edging for ~~pinnet-appeals~~.

Mel. Ay, Flanders lace is a constant present from officers to their women, as something else is from their women to them. They every year bring over a cargo of lace, to cheat the king of his duty, and his subjects of their honesty.

Luc. They only barter one sort of prohibited goods for another, madam.

Mel.

Mel. Has any of 'em been bartering with you, Mrs. Pert, that you talk so like a trader?

Luc. Madam, you talk us pcevily to me, as if it were my fault; the crime is none of mine, tho' I pretend to excuse it: Tho' he shou'd not see you this week, can I help it? But I was saying, madam—his friend, captain Plume, has so taken him up these two days—

Mel. Psha! wou'd his friend, the captain, were ty'd upon his back; I warrant, he has never been sober since that confounded captain came to town: the devil take all officers, I say—they do the nation more harm by debauching us at home, than they do good by defending us abroad: No sooner a captain comes to town, but all the young fellows flock about him, and we can't keep a man to ourselves.

Luc. One wou'd imagine, madam, by your concern for Worthy's absence, that you shou'd use him better when he's with you.

Mel. Who told you, pray, that I was concerned for his absence? I'm only vex'd that I've had nothing said to me these two days: One may like the love, and despise the lover, I hope; as one may love the treason, and hate the traitor: O! here comes another captain, and a rogue that has the confidence to make love to me; but, indeed, I don't wonder at that, when he has the assurance to fancy himself a fine gentleman.

Luc. If he shou'd speak o'th' assignation, I shou'd be ruin'd.

Enter Brazen.[Aside.]

Braz. True to the touch. Faith! [Aside] madam, I am your humble servant, and all that, madam? A fine river this same Severn—Do you love fishing, madam?

Mel. 'Tis a pretty melancholy amusement for lovers.

Braz. I'll go buy hooks and lines presently; for you must know, madam, that I have serv'd in Flanders against the French, in Hungary against the Turks, and in Tangier against the Moors, and I was never so much much in love before; and split me, madam, in all the campaigns I ever made, I have not seen so fine a woman as your ladyship.

Mel. And from all the men I ever saw, I never had so fine a compliment: but you soldiers are the best bred men, that we must allow.

Braz. Some of us, madam—But there are brutes among us too, very sad brutes; for my own part, I have always had the good luck to prove agreeable—I have had very considerable offers, madam—I might have marry'd a German princess, worth fifty thousand crowns a year, but her stove disgusted me. The daughter of a Turkish Bashaw fell in love with me too, when I was prisoner among the infidels; she offer'd to rob her father of his treasure, and make her escape with me: but I don't know how, my time was not come; hanging and marriage, you know, go by destiny. Fate has reserv'd me for a Shropshire lady worth twenty thousand pounds——Do you know any such person madam?

Mel. Extravagant coxcomb! [Aside.] To be sure, a great many ladies of that fortune wou'd be proud of the name of Mrs. Brasen.

Braz. Nay, for that matter, madam, there are women of very good quality of the name of Brasen who drink among

Enter Worthy, L.

Plume. The March beer at the Raven; I have been doubly serving the king, raising men, and raising the excise—Recruiting and elections are rare friends to the excise. L. 1

Wor. You an't drunk.

Plume.

Plume. No, no, whimsical only; I cou'd be mighty foolish, and fancy myse'f mighty witty. Reason still keeps its throne, but it nods a little, that's all.

Wor. Then you're just fit for a frolick.

~~Plume. As fit as close pinners for a punk in the pit.~~

Wor. There's your play then, recover me that vestsel from that Tangerine.

X R Plume. She's well rigg'd, but how is she mann'd?

Wor. By captain Braxen, that I told you of to-day; she is call'd the Melinda, a first-rate, I can assure you; she theer'd off with him just now, on purpose to affront me; but according to your advice I wou'd take no notice, because I wou'd seem to be above a concern for her behaviour; but have a care of a quarrel.

Plume. No, no, I never quarrel with any thing in my cups but an oyster wench, or a cook-maid; ~~and if they been't civil. I knock 'em down. But I'll make, my friend, I'll make love, and I must make love. I tell you what, I'll make love like a platoon.~~

Wor. Platoon, how's that?

Plume. I'll kneel, stoop, and stand, 'faith; most ~~and are gain'd by platooning.~~

Wor. Here they come; I must leave you. [Exit. L.]

Plume. Soh! now must I look as sober, and as demure, as a whore at a christening. Retires up.

Braz. Who's that, madam?

Mel. A brother-officer of yours, I suppose, sir.

Braz. Ay—My dear [To Plume.]

Plume. My dear! [Ben and Ambrose.]

Braz. My dear boy, how is't? Your name, my dear?—if I be not mistaken I have seen your face.

Plume. I never saw yours in my life, my dear—But there's a face well known, as the sun's, that shines on all, and is by all ador'd. X M.

Braz. Have you any pretensions, sir?

Plume. Pretensions!

Braz. That is, sir, have you ever serv'd abroad?

Braz. Then your business is done——I'll make you chaplain to the regiment.

Syl. Your promises are so equal, that I'm at a loss to chuse; there is one Plume, that I hear much commended, in town; pray which of you is captain Plume?

Rose. I know that, but he promis'd to marry me afterwards.

Bull. Wouns, Rose, what have you said?

Syl. Afterwards? After what?

Rose. After I had sold my chickens.——I hope there's no harm in that.

Enter Plume. ^L

Plume. What, Mr. Wilful, so close with my market woman!

Syl. I'll try if he loves her. (Aside.) Close, fir, ay, and closer yet, fir.—Come, my pretty maid, you and I will withdraw ~~and~~.

Plume.

~~X L. C.~~
Plume. No no, friend, ~~I am not~~ done with her yet.

Syl. ~~Not~~ have I begun with her; ~~so~~ I have as good right as you have.

Plume. Thou art a ~~bloody~~ ^{very} impudent fellow.

Syl. Sir, I wou'd qualify myself for the service.

Plume. Hast thou really a mind to the service.

Syl. Yes, fir: so let her go.

L. Rose. Pray gentlemen don't be so violent.

Plume. Come, leave it to the girl's own choice—
Will you belong to me, or to that gentleman?

~~X L. C.~~ Rose. Let me consider, you're both very handsome.

~~L.~~ Plume. Now the natural inconstancy of her sex begins to work.

Rose. Pray, fir, what will you give me? (to Syl.)

Bull. Dunna be angry, fir, that my sister should be mercenary, for she's but young.

Syl. Give thee, child!—I'll set thee above scandal; you shall have a coach, with six before and six behind, an equipage to make vice fashionable and put virtue out of countenance.

Plume. Pho, that's easily done; I'll do more for thee, child, I'll buy you a ~~fine~~ ^{new} ~~below~~ ^{Palace} scarf, and give you a ticket to see a play.

~~R.~~ Bull. A play? wauns Rose, take the ticket, and let's see the show.

Syl. Look'e, captain, if you won't resign, I'll go list with Captain Brazen this minute.

Plume. Will you list with me if I give up my title?

Syl. I will.

Plume. Take her, I'll change a woman for a man at any time.

Rose. I have heard before, indeed, that you captains us'd to sell your men.

~~X~~ Bull. Pray, captain, do not send Rose to the Western Indies.

Plume. Ha, ha, ha! West-Indies! No, no, my honest lad, give me thy hand; nor you, nor she, shall move a step farther than I do——This gentleman is one of us, and will be kind to you, Mrs. Rose.

~~R.~~ Rose. But will you be so kind to me, fir, as the captain wou'd?

C

Syl.

Syl. I can't, ~~be altogether so kind to you,~~ my circumstances are not so good as the captain's; but I'll take care of you, upon my word.

Plume. Ay, ay, we'll all take care of her; she shall live like a princess, and her brother here shall be—
What wou'd you be? ~~Edgar, Duke of York.~~

Bull. O! fir, if you had not promis'd the place of drum-major—

Plume. Ay, that is promis'd—But what think you of barrack-master? You are a person of understanding, and barrack-master you shall be. ~~But~~ x4c.
What's become of this same Cartwheel you told me of, my dear?

Rose. We'll go fetch him.—Come, brother barrack-master—We shall find you at home, noble captain? L.

Plume. Yes, yes; and now, fir, here are your forty shillings.

Syl. Captain Plume, I despise your lusting money; if I ~~do~~ ^{serve}, 'tis purely for love—of that wench, I mean—~~For you must know, that among my~~
~~other lusses, I have spent the best part of my fortune~~
~~in search of a maid, and could never find one hitherto;~~
~~so you may be assur'd I'd not sell my freedom under a~~
~~less purchase than I did my estate—So before I list, I~~
~~must be certify'd that this girl is a virgin.~~

Plume. Mr. Wilful, I can't tell you how you can be certify'd in that point till you try; but upon my honour she may be a vestal, for ought that I know to the contrary.—I gain'd her heart indeed by some trifling presents and promises, and knowing that the best security for a woman's heart is her person, I wou'd have made myself master of that too, had not the jealousy of my impertinent landlady interpos'd.

Syl. So you only want an opportunity for accomplishing your designs upon her.

Plume. Not at all; I have already gain'd my ends, which were only the drawing in one or two of her followers. 'The women, you know, are loadstones every where; gain the wives, and you are caress'd by the husbands; please the mistresses, and you are are valued by the gallants; secure an interest with the finest women at court, and you procure the favour of the greatest men'——So kiss the prettiest country enches, and you are sure of liking the lustiest fellows. Some people may call this artifice, but I term it stratagem, since it is so main a part of the service——Besides, the fatigue of recruiting is so intolerable, that unless we cou'd make ourselves some pleasure amidst the pain, no mortal man wou'd be able to bear it.

Syl. Well, sir, I am satisfy'd as to the point in debate; but now let me beg you to lay aside your recruiting airs; put on the man of honour, and tell me plainly what usage I must expect when I am under your command?

Plume. You must know, in the first place, that I have to have gentlemen in my company; for they are always troublesome and expensive, sometimes dangerous; and 'tis a constant maxim amongst us, that those who know the least, obey the best. Notwithstanding all this, I find something so agreeable about you, that engages me to court your company; and I can't tell how it is, but I shou'd be uneasy to see you under the command of any body else.

Your usage will chiefly depend upon your behaviour; only this you must expect, that if you commit a small fault, I will excuse it; if a great one, I'll discharge you; for something tells me, I shall not be able to punish you.

Syl. And something tells me, that if you do discharge me, 'twill be the greatest punishment you can inflict; for were we this moment to go upon the greatest dangers in your professions, they wou'd be less terrible to me, than to stay behind you——And now your hand, this lists me——And now you are my captain.

Plume. Your friend. [Kiss. See.] 'Sleath! There's something in this fellow that charms me.

Syl. One favour I must beg——This affair will make some noise, and I have some friends that wou'd censure my conduct, if I threw myself into the circumstance stance of a private centinel of my own head—I must therefore take care to be impress'd by the Act of Parliament, you shall leave that to me.

Plume. What you please as to that—Will you lodge at my quarters in the mean time? You shall have part of my bed.

Syl. O fy! lie with a common soldier! Would not you rather lie with a common woman?

Plume. No, faith, I'm not that rake that the world imagines; I have got an air of freedom, which people mistake for lewdness in me, as they mistake formality in others for religion—The world is all a cheat; only I take mine, which is undesign'd, to be more excusable than theirs which is hypocritical. I hurt no body but myself, and they abuse all mankind—Will you lie with me?

Syl. No, no, captain, you forgot Rose; she's to be my bedfellow, you know.

Plume. I had forgot; pray be kind to her.

Scene 2

[Exeunt severally.]

Enter Melinda and Lucy.

Mel. 'Tis the greatest misfortune in nature for a woman to want a confidant: we are so weak, that we can do nothing without assistance, and then a secret makes us worse than the chameleon—I am at this minute so sick of a secret, that I'm ready to faint away—Help me, Lucy.

Luc. Bless me, madam! what's the matter?

Mel. Vapours only, I begin to recover—~~If Sylvia were in town, I could heartily forgive her faults for the sake of discharging my own.~~

Luc. You're thoughtful, madam! am not I worthy to know the cause?

Mel. You are a servant, and a secret may make you faucy.

Luc. Not unless you shou'd find fault without a cause, madam.

Mel. Cause or not cause, I must not lose the pleasure of chiding when I please; women must discharge their vapours somewhere, and before we get husbands our servants must expect to bear with 'em.

Luc.

Luc. Then, madam, you had better raise me to a degree above a servant: you know my family, and that 500*l.* wou'd set me upon the foot of a gentlewoman, and make me worthy the confidence of any lady in the land; besides, madam, 'twill extremely encourage me in the great design I now have in hand.

Mel. I don't find that your design can be of any great advantage to you: 'twill please me, indeed, in the humour I have of being reveng'd on the fool for his vanity of making love to me, so I don't much care if I do promise you five hundred pounds upon my day of marriage.

Luc. This is the way, madam, to make me diligent in the vocation of a confident, which I think is generally to bring people together.

Mel. O Lucy! I can hold my secret no longer: you must know, that hearing of the famous fortune-teller in town, I went disguis'd to satisfy a curiosity, which has cost me dear: that fellow is certainly the devil, or one of his bosom-favourites, he has told me the most surprizing things of my past life?—

Luc. Things past, madam, can hardly be reckon'd surprizing, ~~because we know them already.~~ Did he tell you any thing surprizing that was to come?

Mel. One thing very surprizing; he said I shou'd die a maid!

Luc. Die a maid! ~~come into the world for nothing~~—Dear madam, if you shou'd believe him, it might come to pass; for the bare thought on't might kill one in four and twenty hours——And did you ask him any questions about me?

Mel. You! why, I pass'd for you.

Luc. So 'tis I that am to die a maid——But the devil was a liar from the beginning, ~~he can't make me die a maid—I have put it out of his power already.~~ ~~[aside]~~

Mel. I do but jest, I wou'd have pass'd for you, and call'd myself Lucy; but he presently told me my name, my quality, my fortune, and gave me the whole history

 tory of my life——He told me of a lover I had in this country, and described Worthy exactly, but in nothing so well as in his present indifference.——I fled to him for refuge here to-day, he never so much as encouraged me in my fright, but coldly told me, that he was sorry for the accident, because it might give the town cause to censure my conduct, excus'd his not waiting on me home, made a careless bow, and walk'd off: 'ideath! I cou'd have stab'd him, or myself, 'twas the same thing——Yonder he comes——I will so use him!

Luc. Don't exasperate him, consider what the fortune-teller told you: men are scarce, and as times go, it is not impossible for a woman to die a maid.

Enter Worthy. R.

Mel. No matter.

Wor. I find she's warm'd, I must strike while the iron is hot——You have a great deal of courage, madam, to venture ~~into the walks~~ where you were so lately frighten'd.

Mel. And you have a quantity of impudence to appear before me, that you have so lately affronted.

9
Wor. I had no design to affront you, nor appear before you either, madam: ~~I left you here, because I had business in another place, and came hither thinking to meet another person,~~

Mel. Since you find yourself disappointed, I hope you'll withdraw to another ~~part of the walk.~~ place

Wor. ~~The walk~~ is broad enough for us both. [They walk by one another, he with his hat cock'd, she fretting and tearing her fan.] Will you please to take snuff, madam? [He offers her his box, she strikes it out of his hand; while he is gathering it up, enter Brazen, and takes her round the waist, she cuffs him.]

Braz. What here before me, my dear!

R.C. Mel. What means this insolence?

L.C. Luc. Are you mad! Don't you see Mr. Worthy?

her love in the extremity of her passion: the wildness of her anger is a certain sign that she loves you to abundance of conduct, and will bring you off victorious, my life on't; he plays his part admirably, she's to be with him again presently.

Wor. But what cou'd be the meaning of Brazen's familiarity with her?

Plume. You are no logician, if you pretend to draw consequences from the actions of fools; 'there's no
'arguing by the rule of reason upon a science without
'principles, and such is their conduct'—Whim, unaccountable whim, hurries 'em on like a man drunk

SCENE, A chamber; a table with books and globes.

Kite disguis'd in a strange habit, sitting at a table.

Kite. [Rising.] By the position of the Heavens, gain'd from my observation upon these celestial globes, I find that Luna was a tide-waiter, Sol a surveyor, Mercury a thief, Venus a ^{house} whore, Saturn an alderman, Jupiter a rake, and Mars a serjeant of grenadiers; and this is the system of Kite the conjuror.

Enter Plume and Worthy.

Plume. Well, what success?

Kite. I have sent away a shoemaker and a taylor already; one's to be a captain of marines, and the other a major of dragoons—I am to manage them at night—Have you seen the lady, Mr. Worthy?

Wor. Ay, but it won't do—Have you shew'd her her name, that I tore off from the bottom of the letter?

Kite. No, sir, I reserve that for the last stroke.

Plume. What letter?

Wor. One that I wou'd not let you see, for fear that you shou'd break windows in good earnest. Here, captain, put it into your pocket-book, and have it ready upon occasion.

[Knocking at the door.]

Kite. Officers to your posts. Tycho mind the door.

Enter a Smith.

Smith. Well, master, are you the cunning man?

Kite. I am the learned Copernicus.

Smith. Well, master, I'm but a poor man, and I can't afford above a shilling for my fortune.

Kite. Perhaps that is more than 'tis worth.

Smith. Look'e, doctor, let me have something that's good for my shilling, or I'll have my money again.

Kite. If there be faith in the stars, you shall have your shilling forty-fold—Your hand, countryman, you're by trade a smith.

Smith. How the devil shou'd you know that?

' Kite. Five hundred pounds a year, besides guineas for claps.

' But. Five hundred pounds a year !—an hour and half hence, you say.

' Kite. Prithee, friend, be quiet, don't be troublesome, here's such a work to make a booby butcher accept of five hundred pound a year—But if you must hear it—I'll tell you in short, you'll be standing in your stall an hour and an half hence, and a gentleman will come by with a snuff-box in his hand, and the tip of his handkerchief hanging out of his right pocket ; he'll ask you the price of a loin of veal, and at the same time stroak your great dog upon the head, and call him Chopper.

' But. Mercy on us ! Chopper is the dog's name, Kite. Look'e there—What I say is true—

' But. What ! know Sally too ? He's the devil, and he must needs go that the devil drives. [Going.]

Kite. Your ladyship is to stay much longer than you imagine.

Mel. For what?

Kite. For a husband——For your part, madam, you won't stay for a husband. [To Lucy.]

Luc. Pray, doctor, do you converse with the stars, or the devil?

Kite. With both; when I have the destinies of men in search, I consult the stars; when the affairs of women come under my hands, I advise with my t'other friend.

Mel. And have you rais'd the devil upon my account?

Kite. Yes, madam, and he's now under the table.

~~Plume.~~ Luc. O heavens protect us! Dear madam, let's be gone.

Kite. If you be afraid of him, why do you come to consult him?

Mel. Don't fear, fool; do you think, sir, that because I am a woman, I'm to be fool'd out of my reason, or frighted out of my senses? Come, shew me this devil.

Kite. He's a little busy at present; but when he has done, he shall wait on you.

Mel. What is he doing?

Kite. Writing your name in his pocket-book.

Mel. Ha, ha! my name! Pray what have you or he to do with my name?

Kite. Look'e, fair lady——the devil is a very modest person, he seeks nobody, unless they seek him first: he's chain'd up like a mastiff, and can't stir, unless he be let loose——You come to me to have your fortune told—Do you think, madam, that I can answer you of my own head? No, madam, the affairs of women are so irregular, that nothing ~~less than the devil can give any account of 'em~~. Now to convince you of your incredulity, I'll shew you a trial of my skill—Here, you cacademo del plumo—exert your power, draw me this lady's name, the word Melinda, in proper letters and characters of her own hand-writing—do it at three motions—one—two—three—'tis done—Now, madam, will you please to send your maid to fetch it?

Luc. I fetch it! the devil fetch me if I do.

Mel. My name in my own hand-writing! that wou'd be convincing indeed.

Kite. Seeing's believing. [Goes to the table, lifts up the carpet.] Here, Tre, Tre, poor Tre, give me the bone, hirah. There's your name upon that square piece of paper, behold—Gives Melinda the Paper

Mel. 'Tis wonderful, my very letters to a tittle.

Luc. 'Tis like your hand, madam, but not so like your hand neither; and now I look nearer, 'tis not like your hand at all.

Kite. Here's a chamber-maid now will out-lye the devil!

Luc. Look'e, madam, they sha'n't impose upon us; people can't remember their hands, no more than they can their faces—Come, madam, let us be certain, write your name upon this paper, then we'll compare 'em.

[Takes out a paper, and folds it.]

Kite. Any thing for your satisfaction, madam—here's pen and ink.

[Melinda writes, Lucy holds the paper.]

Luc. Let me see it, madam: 'tis the same—the very same—But I'll secure one copy for my own affairs. [Aside.]

Mel. This is demonstration.

Kite. 'Tis so, madam—The word demonstration comes from Damon the father of lies.

Mel. Well, doctor, I am convince'd; and now, pray, what.

what account can you give of my future fortune?

Kite. Before the sun has made one course round this earthly globe, your fortune will be fix'd for happiness or misery.

Mel. What! So near the crisis of my fate!

Kite. Let me see——About the hour of ten to-morrow morning you will be saluted by a gentleman, who will come to take his leave of you, being design'd for travel; his intention of going abroad is sudden, and the occasion a woman. ~~Your fortune and his are like the bullet and the barrel, one runs plump into the other.~~ —In short, if the gentleman travels, he will die abroad; and if he does, you will die before he comes home.

Mel. What sort of man is he?

Kite. Madam, he's a fine gentleman, and a lover; that is, a man of very good sense, and a very great fool.

Mel. How is that possible, doctor?

Kite. Because, madam——because it is so——A Woman's reason is the best for a man's being a fool.

Mel. Ten a-clock, you say?

Kite. Ten——about the hour of tea-drinking throughout the kingdom.

Mel. Here, doctor. [Gives money.] Lucy, have you any questions to ask?

Luc. O, madam! a thousand.

Kite. I must beg your patience till another time; for I expect more company this minute; besides, I must discharge the gentleman under the table.

Luc. O pray, sir, discharge us first!

Kite. Tycho, wait on the ladies down stairs.

[Exeunt Melinda and Lucy.]

[Enter Worthy and Plume.]

Kite. Mr. Worthy, you were pleas'd to wish me joy to-day, I hope to be able to return the complement to-morrow.

Kite. Right——I told you I was bewitch'd.

Braz. So am I, my dear; I am going to be marry'd——I have had two letters from a lady of fortune that loves me to madness, fits, cholick, spleen, and vapours——shall I marry her in four-and-twenty hours, ay, or no?

You never knew a great general in your life, that did not love a whore. This I only speak in reference to captain Plume—for the other spark I know nothing of.

Scale. Nor can I hear of any body that does—O, ~~but they come.~~

Act ~~Enter~~ Sylvia, Bullock, Rose, prisoners; constable and ~~mob.~~

Begins

Const. May it please your worships, we took them in the very act, ~~we found~~ fir—The gentleman, indeed, behav'd himself like a gentleman; ~~for he drew his sword and swore, and afterwards laid it down and said nothing.~~

Ball. Give the gentleman his sword again. ~~Wait you without. [Exeunt constable and mob.]~~ I'm sorry, fir, [To Sylvia] to know a gentleman upon such terms, that the occasion of our meeting should prevent the satisfaction of an acquaintance.

Syl. Sir, you need make no apology for your warrant, no more than I shall do for my behaviour—My innocence is upon an equal foot with your authority.

R Scale. Innocence! Have not you seduc'd that young maid?

Syl. No, Mr. Gossecap, she seduc'd me.

L Bull. So she did, I'll swear—for she propos'd marriage first.

Ball. What, then you are marry'd, child?

Rose. Yes, fir, to my sorrow.

Ball. Who was witness?

Bull. That was I—I danc'd, threw the stocking, and spoke jokes by their bed-side, I'm sure.

Ball. Who was the minister?

Bull. Minister! We are soldiers, and want no minister——They were marry'd by the articles of war.

Ball. Hold thy prating, fool——Your appearance, sir, promises some understanding; pray what does this fellow mean?

Syl. He means marriage, I think——but that you know is so odd a thing, that hardly any two people under the sun agree in the ceremony; some make it a ceremony, ~~others~~ a convenience, and others make it a jest; but among soldiers 'tis most sacred——Our sword, you know, is our honour, that we lay down——The hero jumps over it first, and the amant after——Leap rogue, follow ~~me~~ warsh The drum beats a ruff, and so to bed; that's all; the ceremony is concise.

Bull. And the prettiest ceremony, so full of pastime and prodigality——

Ball. What! Are you a soldier?

Ball. Ay, that I am——Will your worship lend me your cane, and I'll shew you how I can exercise.

Ball. Take it, [Strikes him over the head.] Pray, sir, what commission may you bear? [To Sylvia.]

Syl. I am call'd captain, ~~for, by all the~~ drawers, ~~and~~ and green-porters in London; for I wear a red coat, a sword, a hat bien trouffée, 'a martial twist in my cravat, a fierce knot in my periwig, a cane upon my button, piquet in my head, and dice in my pocket.

Scale. Your name, pray, sir?

Syl. Captain Pinch: ~~Leck my hat with a pinch;~~ girl take snuff with a pinch, ~~pay my whorls with a pinch;~~ in short, I can do any thing at a pinch, ~~but fight and fill my belly.~~

Ball. And pray, sir, what brought you into Shropshire?

Syl. A pinch, sir; I know you country gentlemen want wit, and you know that we town gentlemen want money, and so——

Ball. I understand you, sir——Here, constable——

Enter Constable. L

Take this gentleman into custody till farther orders.

Rose. Pray your worship don't be uncivil to him, ~~for he~~ did me no hurt; he's the most harmless man in the world, for all he talks so.

Syl. Come, come, child, I'll take care of you.

Syl. What, gentlemen, rob me of my freedom and my wife at once! 'Tis the first time they ever went together.

Ball. Hearn'e, constable.

[Whispers him.]

Const. It shall be done, fir— Come along, fir,

[Exeunt Constable, Bullock, and Sylvia.]

Ball. Come, Mr. Scale, we'll manage the spark presently.

[Exeunt.]

Chorus. S C E N E, Melinda's Apartment.

Enter Melinda and Worthy. L

Mel. So far the prediction is right, 'tis ten exactly. [Aside.] And pray, fir, how long have you been in this travelling humour?

Wor. 'Tis natural, madam, for us to avoid what disturbs our quiet.

Mel. Rather the love of change, which is more natural, may be the occasion of it.

Wor. To be sure, madam, there must be charms in variety, else neither you nor I shou'd be so fond of it.

Mel. You mistake, Mr. Worthy, I am not so fond of variety as to travel for't, nor do I think it prudence in you to run yourself into a certain expence and danger, in hopes of precarious pleasure, which at best never answer expectation; as 'tis evident from the example of most travellers, that long more to return to their own country, than they did to go abroad.

Wor. What pleasure I may receive abroad is indeed uncertain; but this I am sure of, I shall meet with less cruelty among the most barbarous of nations, than I have found at home.

Mel. Come, fir, you and I have been jangling a great great while; I fancy if we made up our accounts, we shou'd the sooner come to an agreement.

Wor. Sure, madam, you won't dispute your being in my debt—My fears, sighs, vows, promises, afflictions, anxieties, jealousies, have run on for a whole year without any payment.

Mel. A year! O Mr. Worley! What you owe to me is not to be paid under seven years servitude: how did you use me the year before? when taking the advantage of my innocence and necessity, you wou'd have made me your mistress, that is, your slave—Remember the wicked insinuations, artful baits, deceitful arguments, cunning pretences; then your impudent behaviour, loose expressions, familiar letters, rude visits; remember those, those, Mr. Worley.

Wor. I do remember, and am sorry I made no better use of 'em. [Aside.] But you may remember, madam, that—

Mel. Sir, I'll remember nothing—'Tis your interest that I should forget: you have been barbarous to me, I have been cruel to you; put that and that together, and let one balance the other—Now if you will begin upon a new score, ~~try aside your adventuring airs,~~ and behave yourself handsomely till Lent be over; here's my hand, I'll use you as a gentleman shou'd be ~~used~~.

Wor. And if I don't use you as a gentlewoman shou'd be, may this be my poison. James [Kissing her hand.]

Enter

Ser. Madam, the coach is at the door.

Mel. I am going to Mr. Ballance's country-house to see my cousin Sylvia: I have done her an injury, and can't be easy till I have ask'd her pardon.

Wor. I dare not hope for the honour of waiting on you.

Mel. My coach is full; but if you'll be so gallant as to mount your own horse and follow us, we shall be glad to be overtaken; and if you bring captain Plume with you, we shan't have the worse reception.

Wor. I'll endeavour it. [Exit, leading Melinda.]

SCENE,

SCENE, The Market-place.Enter Plume and Kite.

Plume. A baker, a taylor, a smith, butcher, carpenters, and journeymen shoemakers, in all thirty-nine—I believe the first colony planted in Virginia had not more trades in their company than I have in mine.

Kite. The butcher, sir, will have his hands full; for we have two sheep-stealers among us—I hear of a fellow too committed just now for stealing of horses.

Plume. We'll dispose of him among the dragoons——Have we never a poulterer among us?

Kite. Yes, sir, the king of the gipfies is a very good one, he has an excellent hand at a goose or a turkey——Here's captain Brazen, sir; I must go look after the men. [Exit.

Enter Brazen, reading a letter.

Braz. Um, um, um, the canonical hour——Um um, very well——My dear Plume! Give me a buff.

Plume. Half a score, if you will, my dear: what hast got in thy hand, child?

Braz. 'Tis a project for laying out a thousand pound.

Plume. Were it not requisite to project first how to get it in?

Braz. You can't imagine, my dear, that I want twenty thousand pounds; I have spent twenty times as much in the service.——'Now, my dear, pray advise me, my head runs much upon architecture, shall I build a privateer or a play house?

Plume. An odd question——a privateer or a play-house! 'twill require some consideration——Faith, I'm for a privateer.

Braz. I'm not of your opinion, my dear—for in the first place a privateer may be ill built.

Plume. And so may a play-house.

Braz. But a privateer may be ill-mann'd?

Plume. And so may a play-house.

Braz. But a privateer may run upon the shallows.

Plume.

THE RECRUITING OFFICER. 73

‘ Plume. Not so often as a play-house.

‘ Braz. But you know a privateer may spring a leak.

‘ Plume. And I know a play-house may spring a great many.

‘ Braz. But suppose the privateer come home with a rich booty, we should never agree about our shares.

‘ Plume. ’Tis just so in a play-house——so, by my advice, you shall fix upon a privateer.

‘ Braz. Agreed—But if this twenty thousand pound should not be in specie——

Plume. What twenty thousand?

Braz. Heark’e.

[Whispers.

Plume. Marry’d!

Braz. Presently, we’re to meet about half a mile out of town at the water-side—and so forth—[Reads.] For fear I should be known by any of Worthy’s friends, you must give me leave to wear my mask till after the ceremony, which will make me for ever yours——

Looke there, my dear dog. [Shows the bottom of the letter to Plume.

Plume, Melinda! And by this light, her own hand! Once more, if you please, my dear—Her hand exactly?——Just now, you say?

Braz. This minute, I must be gone.

Plume. Have a little patience, and I’ll go with you.

Braz. No, no, I see a gentleman coming this way, that may be inquisitive; ’tis Worthy, do you know him?

Plume. By sight only.

Braz. Have a care, the very eyes discover secrets.

[Exit.

Enter Worthy.

Wor. To boot and saddle captain; you must mount.

Plume. Whip and spur Worthy, or you won’t mount.

Wor. But I shall: Melinda and I are agreed; she’s gone to visit Sylvia, we are to mount and follow; and cou'd we carry a parson with us, who knows what might be done for us both?

Plume. Don't trouble your head, Melinda has secur'd a parson already.

Wor. Already! do you know more than I?

Plume. Yes, I saw it under her hand——Brazen and she are to meet half a mile hence at the water-side, there to take boat. I suppose to be ferry'd over to the Elysian fields, if there be any such thing in matrimony.

Wor. I parted with Melinda just now, she assur'd me she hated Brazen, and that she resolv'd to discard Lucy for daring to write letters to him in her name.

Plume. Nay, nay, there's nothing of Lucy in this—I tell ye, I saw Melinda's hand, as surely as this is mine.

Wor. But I tell you she's gone this minute to Justice Ballance's country-house.

Plume. But I tell you, she's gone this minute to the water-side.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam Melinda has sent word, that you need not trouble yourself to follow her, because her journey to Justice Ballance's is put off, and she's gone to take the air another way.

[To Worthy.

Wor. How! her journey put off!

Plume. That is, her journey was put off to you.

Wor. 'Tis plain, plain——But how, where, when is she to meet Brazen?

Plume. Just now, I tell you, half a mile hence, at the water-side.

Wor. Up or down the water?

Plume. That I don't know.

Wor. I'm glad my horses are ready——Jack, get 'em out.

[Exit. Ser.

Plume. Shall I go with you?

Wor. Not an inch——I shall return presently.

[Exit.

Plume. You'll find me at the hall; the Justices are sitting by this time, and I must attend them.

SCENE, ³*A Court of Justice: Ballance, Scale, and Scruple upon the Bench: Constable, Kite, Mob.*

Kite and Constable advance forward. R -

~~Kite. Pray, who are those honourable gentlemen upon the Bench?~~

~~Const. He in the middle is Justice Ballance, he on the right is Justice Scale, and he on the left is Justice Scruple, and I am Mr. Constable; four very honest gentlemen.~~

~~Kite. O dear sir! I am your most obedient servant: [Saluting the Constable.] I fancy, sir, that your employment and mine are much the same; for my business is to keep people in order, and if they disobey, to knock 'em down; and then we are both staff-officers.~~

~~Const. Nay, I'm a serjeant myself—of the militia—come, brother, you shall see me exercise; suppose this a musket: Now I am shoulder'd.~~

~~Kite. Ay, you are shoulder'd pretty well for a constable's staff; but for a musket, you must put it on the other shoulder, my dear.~~

~~Const. Adso! that's true—come, now give the word of command.~~

~~Kite. Silence.~~

~~Const. Ay, ay, so we will—we will be silent.~~

~~Kite. Silence you dog, silence!~~

~~[Strikes him over the head with his halbert.]~~

~~Const. That's the way to silence a man with a witness—What d'ye mean, friend?~~

~~Kite. Only to exercise you, sir.~~

~~Const. Your exercise differs so much from ours, that we shall ne'er agree about it, if my own captain had given me such a rap, I had taken the law of him.~~

~~Enter Plume. L.~~

~~Ball. Captain, you're welcome.~~

~~Plume. Gentlemen, I thank you.~~

~~Scru. Come, honest captain, sit by me. [Plume ascends and sits upon the bench.] Now produce your prisoners—here, that fellow there—set him up.~~

——Mr. Constable, what have you to say against this man?

Const. I have nothing to say against him, an please you.

Ball. No! what made you bring him hither?

Const. I don't know, an please your worship.

Scale. Did not the contents of your warrant direct you what sort of men to take up?

Const. I can't tell, an please ye; I can't read.

Scru. A very pretty constable truly—— I find we have no business here.

Kite. May it please the worshipful bench, I desire to be heard in this case, as being counsel for the king.

Ball. Come serjeant, you shall be heard, since no body else will speak; we won't come here for nothing.

Kite. This man is but one man, the country may spare him, and the army wants him; besides he's cut out by nature for a grenadier; he's five foot ten inches high; he shall box, wrestle, or dance the Cheshire round with any man in the county; he gets drunk every sabbath-day, and he beats his wife.

Wife. You lie, sirrah, you lie; an please your worship, he's the best natur'd pains-taking't man in the parish, witness my five poor children.

Scru. A wife! and five children! ~~You constable, you rogue, how durst you imprecate a man that has a wife and five children?~~

Scale. Discharge him, discharge him

C Ball. Hold, gentlemen—— Hark'e, friend, how do you maintain your wife and five children?

L. Plume. They live upon wild-fowl and venison, sir; the husband keeps a gun, and kills all the hares and partridges within five mile round.

Ball. A gun! nay, if he be so good at gunning, he shall have enough on't.—— He may be of use against the ~~king~~, for he shoots flying to be sure.

Scru. But his wife and children, Mr. Ballance!

Wife.

How

Wife. Ay, ay, that's the reason you wou'd send him away, you know I have a child every year, and you are afraid they should come upon the parish at last.

Plume. Look'e there, gentlemen, the honest woman has spoke it at once, the parish had better maintain five children this year, than six or seven the next : ~~That fellow, upon this high feeding, may get you two or three beggars at a birth.~~

Wife. Look'e, Mr. Captain, the parish shall get nothing by sending him away, ~~for I won't lose my time, if there be a man left in the parish.~~

Ball. Send that woman to the house of correction.—and the man—

Kite. I'll take care of him, if you please.

Scale. Here, you constable, the next—Set up that black-fac'd fellow, he has a gun-powder look ; what can you say against this man, constable ?

Const. Nothing, but that he is a very honest man.

Plume. Pray, gentlemen, let me have one honest man in my company, for the novelty's sake.

Ball. What are you, friend ?

Mob. A collier, ~~he~~ work in the coal-pits.

Scru. Look'e, gentlemen, ~~this fellow has a trade, and the act of parliament here expresses, that we are to impress no man that has any visible means of a livelihood.~~ in Kite. May it please your worships, this man has no visible means of a livelihood, for he works under ground.

Plume. Well said, Kite ; besides the army wants miners.

Ball. Right, and had we an order of government for't, we cou'd raise you in this and the neighbouring county of Stafford, five hundred colliers that wou'd run you under-ground like moles, and do more service in a siege than all the miners in the army.

Scru. Well friend, what have you to say for yourself ?

Mob. I'm marry'd.

Kite. Lack-a-day, so am I.

Mob. Here's my wife, poor woman.

Ball. Are you marry'd, good woman?

Wom. I'm marry'd in conscience.

Kite. May it please your worship, she's ~~with child~~ in conscience.

Scale. Who marry'd you, mistress?

Wom. My husband. ~~We agreed that I should~~ ~~with him husband, to avoid passing for a whore, and~~ we agreed that he should call me wife, to shun going for a soldier.

Scru. A very pretty couple! pray captain, will you take 'em both?

Plume. What say you, Mr. Kite, will you take care of the woman?

Kite. Yes, sir, she shall go with us to the sea-side, and there, if she has a mind to drown herself, we'll take care that no body shall hinder her.

Ball. Here, constable, bring in my man. [Exit L constable.] Now captain, I'll fit you with a man, such as you he'er list'd in your life. [Enter constable and L you.

Syl. Well, sir, and what then?

Scale. What then! Is that your respect to the bench?

Syl. Sir, I don't care a farthing for you nor your bench neither.

Scru. Look'e, gentlemen, that's enough, he's a very impudent fellow, and fit for a soldier.

Scale. A notorious rogue, I say, and very fit for a soldier.

Const. ~~A whore master, I say, and therefore fit to~~ ~~go~~

Ball. What think you, captain?

Plume. I think he's a very pretty fellow, and therefore fit to serve.

Syl. Is it your wife, or daughter, booby?

Ball. Pray, captain, read the articles of war, we'll

Plume. [Reads.] Articles of war against mutiny and desertion—&c.

Syl. Hold, sir—Once more, gentlemen, have a care what you do, for you shall severely smart for any violence you offer to me; and you, Mr. Ballance, I speak to you particularly, you shall heartily repent it.

Plume. Look'e young spark, say but one word more, and I'll build a horse for you as high as the cieling, and make you ride the most tiresome journey that ever you made in your life.

Sylw. You have made a fine speech, good captain Huffcap; but you had better be quiet, I shall find a way to cool your courage.

Plume. Pray, gentlemen, don't mind him, he's distracted.

Syl. 'Tis false—I am descended of as good a family as any in your county; my father is as good a man as any upon your bench, and I am heir to twelve hundred pound a year.

Ball. He's certainly mad—Pray, captain, read the articles of war.

Syl. Hold once more—Pray, Mr. Ballance, to you
I speak, suppose I were your child, wou'd you use me at this rate?

Ball. No 'faith, were you mine, I wou'd send you to Bedlam first, and into the army afterwards.

Syl. But consider my father, sir, he's as good, as generous, as brave, as just a man as ever serv'd his country; I'm his only child, perhaps the loss of me may break his heart.

Syl. 'Tis true, sir, but this rogue of a constable let the rest escape for a bribe of eleven shillings a man, because, he said, the act allow'd him but ten, so the odd shilling was clear gains.

All Just. How!

Syl. Gentlemen, he offer'd to let me go away for two guineas, but I had not so much about me; this is truth, and I'm ready to swear it.

Kite. And I'll swear it; give me the book, 'tis for the good of the service.

Collier. ~~Now~~ May it please your worship, I gave him half a crown to say that I was an honest man; but now, since that your worships have made me a rogue, I hope I shall have my money again.

Braz. The boat is just below here.

Enter Worthing with a case of pistols under his arm. R.

Wor. Here, sir, take your choice.

[Going between them, and offering them.]

Braz. What! pistols! are they charg'd, my dear?

Wor. With a brace of bullets each.

Braz. But I'm a foot officer, my dear, and never use pistols, the sword is my way—~~and I won't be~~

Wor. Nor I neither: so have at you.

[Cocks one pistol.]

Braz. Look'e, my dear, I don't care for pistols—
Pray, oblige me, and let us have about at sharps; damn it, there's no parrying these bullets.

Wor. Sir, if you ha'n't your belly full of these, the swords shall come in for second course.

Braz. Why then, fire and fury! I have eaten smock from the mouth of a cannon, sir; don't think I fear powder, for I live upon't. ~~Let me see:~~ [Takes one.]
And now, sir, how many paces distant shall we fire?

Wor. Fire you when you please, I'll reserve my shot till I am sure of you.

Wor. Cloak! what d'ye mean?

Braz. To fight upon; I always fight upon a cloak, 'tis our way abroad.

Wor. And was Melinda privy to this?

Luc. No, sir, she wrote her name upon a piece of paper at the fortune-teller's last night, which I put in my pocket, and so wait above it to the captain.

Wor. And how came Melinda's journey put off?

Luc. At the town's-end she met Mr. Ballance's steward, who told her, that Mrs. Sylvia was gone from her father's, and no body could tell whither.

Wor. Sylvia gone from her father's! this will be news to Plume. Go home, and tell your lady how near I was being shot for her.

Enter Ballance and Steward.

Stew. We did not miss her till the evening, sir; and then searching for her in the chamber that was my young master's, we found her cloaths there; but the suit that your son left in the press, when he went to London, was gone.

Ball. The white trim'd with silver?

Stew. The same.

Stew. To none but your worship.

Ball. Perhaps, sir, you shan't repent your generosity—Will you please to write his discharge in my pocket-pocket-book? [Gives his book.] In the mean time, we'll send for the gentleman. Who waits there?

William. Enter a Soldier. R.
Go to the captain's lodging, and enquire for Mr. Wilful, tell him his captain wants him here immediately.

Syl. Sir, the gentleman's below at the door, enquiring for the captain.

Plume. Bid him come up—Here's the discharge, sir.

Ball. Sir, I thank you—'Tis plain he had no hand in't.

Enter Sylvia. R.

Syl. I think, captain, you might have us'd me better then to leave me yonder among your swearing drunken crew; and you, Mr. Justice, might have been so civil as to have invited me to dinner, for I have eaten with as good a man as your worship.

Plume. Sir, you must charge our want of respect upon our ignorance of your quality—but now you are at liberty—I have discharg'd you.

Syl. Discharg'd me!

Ball. Yes, sir, and you must once more go home to your father.

Syl. My father! Then I am discover'd—Oh, sir, [Kneeling.] I expect no pardon.

Ball. Pardon! No, no, child, your crime shall be your punishment; here captain, I deliver her over to the conjugal power for her chastisement. Since she will be a wife, be you a husband, a very husband—when she tells you of her love, upbraid her with her folly; be modishly ungrateful, because she has been unfashionably kind, and use her worse than you wou'd any body else, because you can't use her so well as she deserves.

Plume. And are you Sylvia in good earnest?

Syl. Earnest! I have gone too far to make it a jest, sir?

Plume. And do you give her to me in good earnest?

Ball. If you please to take her, sir.

Plume. Why then I have sav'd my legs and arms, and and lost my liberty; secure from wounds, I am prepared for the gout; farewell subsistence, and welcome taxes—Sir, my liberty, and hopes of being a general, are much dearer to me than your twelve hundred pound a year—But to your love, madam, I resign my freedom, and to your beauty my ambition—greater in obeying at your feet, than commanding at the head of an army.

Enter Worthy. R.

Wor. I am sorry to hear, Mr. Ballance, that your daughter is lost.

Ball. So am not I, sir, since an honest gentleman has found her.

Enter Melinda. R.

Mel. Pray, Mr. Ballance, what's become of my cousin Sylvia?

Ball. Your cousin Sylvia is talking yonder with your cousin Plume.

Mel. and Wor. How!

Syl. Do you think it strange, cousin, that a woman should change; but, ~~I hope, you'll excuse a change that has proceeded from constancy~~; I alter'd my outside, because I was the same within; and only laid by the woman to make sure of my man, ~~that's my history~~.

Mel. Your history is a little romantick, cousin; but since success has crown'd your adventures, you will have the world o'your side, and I shall be willing to go with the tide, provided you'll pardon an injury I offer'd you in the letter to your father.

Plume. That injury, madam, was done to me, and the reparation I expect shall be made to my friend; make Mr. Worthy happy, and I shall be satisfied.

Mel. A good example, sir, will go a great way—when my cousin is pleas'd to surrender, 'tis probable I sha'n't hold out much longer.

Enter Brazen. R.

Braz. Gentlemen, I am yours—madam, I am not yours.

Mel. I'm glad on't, sir.

Braz. So am I—You have got a pretty house here, Mr. Lacnick.

E.

Ball.

Ball. 'Tis time to right all mistakes—my name, sir, is Ballance.

Braz. Ballance! Sir, I am your most obedient—I know your whole generation—had not you an uncle that was governor of the Leeward islands some years ago?

Ball. Did you know him?

Braz. Intimately, sir———He play'd at Billiards to a miracle——You had a brother too that was a captain of a fire-ship——poor Dick——he had the most engaging way with him——of making punch——and then his cabin was so neat——but his poor boy Jack was the most comical bastard——Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha! a pickled dog, I shall never forget him.

Plume. Well, captain, are you still in your project yet? are you still for the privateer?

Braz. No, no, I had enough of a privateer just now; I had like to have been pick'd up by a cruiser under false colours, and a French pickaroon for ought I know.

Plume. But have you got your recruits, my dear?

Braz. Not a stick, my dear.

Plume. Probably, I shall furnish you.

Enter, Rose and Bullock.

Rose. Captain, captain, I have got loose once more, and have persuaded my sweet-heart Caroline to go with us; but you must promise not to part with me again.

Syl. I find, Mrs. Rose has not been pleas'd with her bedfellow.

Rose. Bedfellow! I don't know whether I had a bedfellow or not.

Syl. Don't be in a passion, child, I was as little pleas'd with your company, as you cou'd be with mine.

Bull. Pray, sir, donna be offended at my sister, she's something under bred, but if you please, I'll lie with you in her stead.

Plume. I have promis'd, madam, to provide for this girl; now will you be pleas'd to let her wait upon you? or shall I take care of her?

THE RECRUITING OFFICER. 87

Syl. She shall be my charge, sir; you may find it business enough to take care of me.

Bull. Ay, and of me, captain; for wauns! if ever you lift your hand against me, I'll desert.

Plume. ~~Captain Bull~~ shall take care o' that: my dear, instead of the twenty thousand pound you talk'd of, you shall have the twenty brave recruits that I have rais'd ~~at the rate they cost me~~—My commission I lay down, to be taken up by some braver fellow, that has more merit, and less good fortune—whilst I endeavour, by the example of this worthy gentleman, to serve my king and country at home.

*With some regret I quit the active field,
Where glory full reward for life does yield;
But the recruiting trade, with all its train
Of endless plague, fatigue, and endless pain,
I gladly quit, with my fair spouse to stay,
And raise recruits the matrimonial way.* [Exeunt.

E P I L O G U E.

ALL ladies and gentlemen, that are willing to see the Comedy, call'd the Recruiting-Officer, let them repair to-morrow night, by six o'clock, to the sign of the Theatre-Royal, in Drury-Lane, and they shall be kindly entertain'd.

*We scorn the vulgar way to bid you come,
Whole Europe now obeys the call of drum.
The Soldier, not the Poet, here appears,
And beats up for a corps of volunteers:
He finds that music chiefly does delight ye,
And therefore chuses musick to invite ye.*

EPILOGUE.

Beat the Grenadier March—Row, row, row,
Gentlemen, this piece of musick, call'd, An Overture to a Battle, was compos'd by a famous Italian master, and was perform'd with wonderful success, at the great Opera's of Vigo, Schellenbergh and Blenheim; it came off with the applause of all Europe, excepting France; the French found it a little too rough for their delicatessè.

*Some that have acted on those glorious stages,
Are here to witness to succeeding ages,
That no musick like the Grenadier's engages.* }

Ladies, we must own, that this musick of ours is not altogether so soft as Bononcini's: yet we dare affirm, that it has laid more people asleep than all the Camilla's in the world; and you'll condescend to own that it keeps one awake, better than any opera that ever was acted.

The Grenadier March seems to be a composure excellently adapted to the Genius of the English, for no musick was ever follow'd so far by us, nor with so much alacrity; and with all deference to the present subscription, we must say, that the Grenadier March has been subscrib'd for by the whole grand alliance: and we presume to inform the ladies, that it always has the pre-eminence abroad, and is constantly heard by the tallest, handsomest men in the whole army. In short, to gratify the present taste, our Author is now adapting some words to the Grenadier March, which he intends to have perform'd to-morrow, if the lady, who is to sing it, should not happen to be sick.

*This he concludes to be the surest way
To draw you hither; for you'll all obey
Soft musick's call, tho' you should damn his Play.* }
